While testing video card drivers from major GPU manufacturer NVIDIA and AMD on Nvidia's official website, our team discovered an interesting glitch regarding both manufacturers. It comes as a result of the sudden failure of one or more graphics cards. After a brief review of possible causes, a new test is created that helps to reveal the truth behind the phenomenon. A fresh setup and an extensive test of our new combination (AMD's RX 580 8GB – 4x 1920x1080, NVidia's GeForce GTX 1080 8GB) reveals an interesting feature of the new graphics cards – a huge difference in gaming performance. NVIDIA's video card is about 15% faster, despite having the same memory capacity. This shows that both manufacturers get more FPS from a single video card than expected, which can create a mystery behind the phenomena.
